MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

There have been many books, movies and stories about the War of the Rebellion, better known as the Civil War, where brother fought against brother.

This area of our history has been preserved over the years with the reconstruction of old forts and the reenactment of Civil War battles throughout the State.

The Washington County Genealogical Society has set aside a portion of our Spring Journal for this purpose, therefore we dedicate this journal to all the men and women who fought so diligently to preserve their way of life and their beliefs.

Russell Tyson, President

IN THIS ISSUE

Whether you live here or plan to visit Plymouth, it might pay to check the ordinances in this issue - just to make sure you're don't get a speeding ticket! Or get charged with being a vagrant (It might behoove our powers-that-be to return them to current day use!) The ordinances are concluded in this issue. The listings for Windley Cemetery continues (albeit briefly for want of space), as do deed abstracts by Jeanne O'Neal and Louise Smith. However, the primary focus here is on the period of the War Between the States. Genealogist Jennifer M. Sheppard of Martin County, ever-dependable Edwin Norman, together with Barbara M. Revels, Janice Tyson, Vernon Everett, among others, contribute material to help in your continuing search for Civil War ancestors - Confederate or Union.

We are a county rich in history - past, present and future: All of which makes us continue to be proud to boast: I Like Calling (Washington County) North Carolina Home!

A BIT OF VENGEANCE IN THE STORM

by Edwin A. Norman

My father was eye-witness to this little drama, and told it to me more than a half century ago. Regretfully, I don't remember the names of the storm riders. They were from Plymouth, and were returning from Tyrrell. The date of the incident was, almost surely, between 1886 and 1890. The locale was the first farm east of present-day Creswell Prison Camp. On the farm, near the house, was the intersection of a public way meandering south from what we know as "Blood Street" and an east-west road, both now long abandoned.

The night was black and cold, and the rain beat hard against the shuttered windows. Eli Snell, his wife, and Eli's step-children sat close about the hearth; some with their sewing, some with their primer or sums, and Eli, perhaps, with his memories of the hard marches, the Long Roll and the powder smoke, and the long months captive at the notorious Point Lookout prison.

The quick tread of boots on the sodden porch, and a quick but friendly knock, sent Eli to the door. He was quick to recognize and welcome an old comrade of camp and battlefield. Looking past his friend into the driving rain, he could barely make out another man, still mounted, hunched low against the bitter blasts.

Without removing his dripping slicker, the friend stood just inside the door. "Eli," he said, "the man with me is _____. He won't come to your door without your leave. We're riding together on business, not in friendship. Will you give us shelter?"

"Old friend," said Eli gently, "You know that you are welcome in my house to stay out the storm. But," now speaking hotly, "_____ shall not enter here, or sleep in my barn, or set foot on my land! YOU know that while I was with the army he came to this house with his Buffaloes, and took what he wanted from house, and barn, and pasture, while my mother stood helpless with my sister and my little brother."

"You stay with us. He must go quickly...NOW."

"Eli, I know what he was in the war, and what he did. I know how you feel, and you are right. But, like him or not, I'm traveling with him, and must keep him company on the road."

They parted with a warm, lingering handshake. Eli watched as his friend walked quickly to the hitching post, took his reins, shook his head to his companion, swung into the saddle, and rode off westward up the storm-swept road. The route would take them through "Patricktown." As some of the Patricks had sided with the Union, the travelers would there find shelter from the storm.

SAME AGE: DIFFERENT FATE

by Edwin A. Norman

The youngest soldiers of Co. G., 17th N. C. Infantry were Hardy W. Davenport and William W. Windley, both of whom enlisted at age 15.

Hardy was raised (if we can call a scant 15 years a raising) in eastern Skinnersville District. His father, Hardy, was a small farmer with only two slaves, both young females. So, we can be pretty sure that young Hardy spent many long days in the fields while the fish were jumping and plump squirrels taunted him from oak and hickory.

Trading his plow for the musket in February 1863, he was "present or accounted for" through July 30, 1864. On that day, as the siege lines tightened around Richmond and Petersburg, he was killed in defence of the latter. Records indicate that his death was quick and clean, sparing him the fate of so many of his comrades...a slow, lingering death in the inadequate hospitals of that time.

William Windley "grew up" on a farm near Plymouth. His father, Jacob, had died in the late 1850's. His mother, Mary, (called Polly), ran the farm with the siblings and 12 slaves, eight of which were males. We may conjecture that William was not so familiar with the plow as his counterpart, Hardy.

William enlisted in March 1862. Slightly wounded once, he served with honor for 2 1/2 years. Then, on October 28, he committed the most abominable of military crimes...he "deserted to the enemy while on picket." He took the Oath of Allegiance to the United States, and was released in early November. As Washington County was by then firmly under Union control, we may surmise that he returned home.

Washington County marriage records show that William married Emma Jane Harrison on March 15, 1866.

THE MONTGOMERY BLUES FIELD ARTILLERY AGAINST GUNBOATS ON THE ALBEMARLE SOUND

by Edwin A. Norman

The Montgomery (Alabama) Blues was organized in 1836 to march to the relief of Florida in the Seminole War.

Mustered into Confederate service early in the Civil War, they helped protect the Wilmington-Richmond railroads and took part in the capture of Plymouth in April 1864. The unit remained in the Plymouth area until the destruction of the ironclad C.S.S. Albemarle forced the Confederates to evacuate the Albemarle-Pamlico peninsula at the end of October.

We are indebted to the Alabama Department of Archives and History for the following account of one of the blues' engagements while in our area. This account is from the MONTGOMERY DAILY ADVERTISER, October 11, 1864:

EXPLOIT OF THE MONTGOMERY TRUE BLUES

We are permitted to publish the following letter giving an account of a recent exploit by a portion of the Montgomery True Blues on Albemarle Sound.

Oct. 1, 1864 Plymouth, N.C.

Yesterday two guns of this battery engaged five gunboats on the Albemarle Sound near the mouth of Scuppernong River, and after a fight of three hours drove them back out of range of our guns.

The boats were within seven hundred yards of our guns, and the cries of the Yankee wounded could be distinctly heard as our shells burst among them. One boat was disabled and had to be towed off by the other when they retired from the fight. The usual good luck attended our boys, none killed, three slightly wounded: two of whom, Lou Gilmer and Dick Felder, have since reported for duty. The other is A. J. McLaclin. The Yankees made the place pretty warm, but our boys gave them shot for shot. While Gilmer was loading the howitzer the rammer was cut in two in his hands and a portion of his coat sleeve carried away by a fragment of a shell. Felder was thrown senseless on the ground by the bursting of a shell near him, but he soon recovered and worked his gun until the close of the action. The limber of one gun was completely destroyed, wheels and all being riddled by the Yankee grape and shell...."

According to Alabama Archives, the blues were variously known as Montgomery True Blues, Montgomery Blues, Montgomery Light Artillery, Montgomery Light Artillery Blues, and Co. G., 3rd Regiment, Alabama Infantry.

A "mystery roster" - we don't know when it was compiled, or by whom - in the vertical files of the Washington County Library shows 20 men from the Washington-Tyrrell area as members of the blues. Jimmy Hardison, member of the reactivated Washington Grays and past president of the Washington County Historical Society, has followed up on this roster with research at National Archives, and has learned that at least 16 of these young men did serve in that unit. Further research may confirm the other four, whose names are asterisked (*) below:

CHARLES ALLEN	EDWARD NORMAN *
A. G. BOWEN*	WARREN NORMAN *
D. A. BOWEN	ALEXANDER OVERTON
B. W. CLAGHORN (CLAGON)	ALFRED SPRUILL
THOMAS DOWNING	JAMES A. SPRUILL
MARTIN GARRETT	WINFIELD SPRUILL
W. G. GAYLORD	JOHN STILLMAN
GEORGE HOPKINS	JAMES SWAIN *
W. W. LEARY	JOHN G. SWAIN
J. F. McCABE	JOSEPH VAIL

Hardison's research also discloses that three men of our area, not on the "mystery roster," also served with the Blues, i.e.: George B. Wiley, Henry A. Gerkins, and Edward F. Britton.

BUTTERY BROTHERS

by Barbara M. Revels

On 24 June, 1861, the company known as the "Washington Volunteers" was raised in Washington County and enlisted at Plymouth. On 3 July, 1861, the Company was ordered to New Bern and from there to Raleigh and then to Warrenton in Warren County.

The Company arrived in Warrenton about 20 July and became "Company G" of the 1st Regiment of North Carolina Troops. After joining the regiment, the company functioned as a part of the regiment, and its history for the war period is recorded as a part of the regimental history.

Three members of this company were brothers Elisha, Reuben, and Jordan Buttery. John Buttery, also a member, could have possibly been a cousin, uncle or just a neighbor. Jordan, age 25, enlisted 24 June, 1861 and died at Fredericksburg, Virginia, 10 December, 1861. Reuben, age 27, enlisted 24 June, 1861 and was present and accounted for until he died in Fredericksburg, Virginia, 20 October, 1861. Elisha, age 34, enlisted 24 June, 1861, and was present and accounted for until captured at Gettysburg, Pennsylvania, 3 July 1861. Elisha was confined at Point Lookout, Maryland, where he took the Oath of Allegiance and joined the United States Navy on 23 January, 1864. Elisha, seaman, served on the Commodore Morris from December 1863 to 26 June, 1865. Elisha is buried in the Christian Hope Church of Christ Cemetery, Plymouth, North Carolina.

John Buttery, age 44, enlisted 24 June 1861 and was present and accounted for until discharged at Richmond, Virginia, 2 September, 1861, by reason of disability.

TAX IN KIND

The Confederate "Tax in Kind" was a tithe on farm production. This Act, and the Conscription and Impressment Acts, were extremely unpopular with the mass of loyal southerners. In August 1864, date of the above receipt, Washington and Tyrrell Counties were under Confederate control, so the tax system was temporarily functional.

Edny (she usually spelled it "Edney") E. Snell was widow of Franklin *1806-1860). In her fine bold hand, she would later record some of the Snell vital records in the leathern notebook of her school teacher son, Doctraine, who died of typhoid in a C.S.A. hospital at Petersburg in 1862. Another son, Eli, would be captured at Wise's Fork in March 1865.

Edney Snell was born 22 February, 1810. She died 9 July, 1883.

SAMUEL STILLMAN

by Jennifer M. Sheppard

My second Great Grandfather, Samuel Stillman was born on 23 January 1837 in Washington County, North Carolina. The first record I located on him was the 1850 Federal Census of Washington County. He is listed as a 13 year old boy with his father, Mayberry Stillman and step-mother, Anne King Stillman.

The 1860 Federal Census of Washington County has Samuel enumerated with the Lemuel Swain family on Page 73. Samuel is listed as a 23 year old day laborer and his wife, Caroline Swain Stillman, is listed under her mother, Elizabeth Swain. When I first saw this Census Record, I thought Caroline might be a sister of Samuel. It was not until 1993 that I found Samuel's Pension Application that named his first wife as Caroline Swain.

In Plymouth on 21 October 1862, Samuel enlisted in the Union Army for term of 3 years. He is described in his Military Service Records as 25 years old with dark complexion, hazel eyes and black hair. His occupation was given as Farmer. Samuel was assigned to Company C, 1 North Carolina Infantry.

Samuel and his wife and family were taken to Beaufort, Carteret, Co. North Carolina and kept under protection of Federal Troops. According to Sam's Pension Application, all the children he and Caroline had either died at birth or an early age. Samuel stated on his pension application that he and Caroline had married about 1858. Caroline died on 9 July 1865 while the family was living in Beaufort, North Carolina.

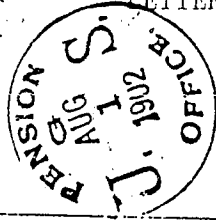

Samuel was discharged in New Bern, North Carolina on 27 June 1865. I am not sure when Samuel moved back to Washington County but he met and married my Second Great Grandmother Mary Emily Modlin (who was born 22 October 1851 in Jamesville, Martin County) on 20 January 1867.

Together they had 10 children, seven of whom were living on 8 June 1900, at the time they were visited by the Census Taker for the 1900 Federal Census of Plymouth, Washington County, NC. Their family included one set of twin boys who were born in January 1887.

My Second Great Grandfather, Samuel applied for and was granted a Pension for his service during the Civil War. His pension application revealed he suffered from organic heart disease as a result of rheumatism, he also suffered heart palpitations accompanied by fainting spells as well as kidney problems.

Samuel died on 5 February 1920 and on 20 February 1920 his widow Mary Emily Modlin Stillman. She was granted $25.00 per month commencing 8 Mar 1920 and $30.00 commencing 1 May 1920. Mary followed her husband, living only until 12 November 1920. The known children of Samuel and Mary Emily Modlin Stillman were: Alethia Ann, Catherine, Emily, Ellen Virginia, Aberthere C., Susan Viola and twins, James Crofferd and Milleard John Stillman.

Samuel Stillman was a man who could read and write as evidenced by this. It was a thrill to find his handwriting among his Pension Records.

JAMES HARVEY LUCAS

OLDEST SOLDIER OF COMPANY G

by Edwin A. Norman

On 10 January, 1863, James Harvey Lucas, 54-year old farmer of Skinnersville District, enlisted in Company G., 17th North Carolina Infantry. The abstract of his service record shows that he enlisted as a "substitute", for whom is not recorded.

Across the span of 130 years, we can only wonder why, at his age under no threat of conscription, he chose to go to war. Did he find day-to-day life in an area occupied by the enemy intolerable: Was he fulfilling some lifelong dream of going "with streaming banners where noble deeds are done?" Was his enlistment influenced by the recent enlistment of his 29-year old son, Boyd, in Company H of the 17th? Or did he feel that his family desperately needed the $300 that was usually paid for a substitute?

His great-granddaughter, Pauline Lucas, in her delightful Lucas family history, tells us that, due to his age, he was assigned chiefly to duties around camp. Private Lucas died of "fever" at the Confederate hospital at Hamilton on 30 June, 1863. Miss Lucas relates that the fever was malaria, and that his son and comrade-in-arms, Boyd, was with him when he died.

N. C. TROOPS. Vol. VI: North Carolina Archives & History
"Tell It Again": The History of a Family. Pauline Lucas. 1987

NOTE: Richard Harvey Lucas, Sr., whom many of our older WCGS members remember as the celebrated "Blind Preacher," was also a great-grandchild of Company G's oldest soldier. Rev. Lucas (1885-1971), a Baptist, was a noted speaker for church, civic, and school functions. He was especially sought as preacher of baccalaureate sermons. He owned and operated Springwood Dairy, Plymouth.

Miss Pauline Lucas, sister to Rev. Lucas, had a long career as an educator. Her well-written book gives her humorous, poignant, reminiscences of three-quarters of a century, family "oral" history, and many group sheets for 19th and 20th century Lucas (and related) families. It is available for reference in the North Carolina Collection at the Washington County Library.

Miss Lucas, now 94, lives in Charlotte.

(Editor's Note: Richard Harvey Lucas was born 12 March 1885 and died 6 June 1971, 17 days after "fall from porch [5/20/71]." Surviving spouse: Caddie Phelps - Washington County Register of Deeds - Deaths, Book 43, Page 92)

HOW TO - WITH A FLAIR

Book Review - by Edwin A. Norman

TRACING YOUR CIVIL WAR ANCESTOR, copyright 1979 by Bertram Hawthorne Groene, is easily one of the finest guides to genealogical / historical research of Civil War personnel. The book is now available in a Ballantine paperback edition.

Mr. Groene gives us his advice with a folksiness, and an obvious affection for his subject, seldom found in books of this genre. His tracing of inscribed small arms to their original owners is informative, entertaining, and great fun.

Especially intriguing to us of the Roanoke is his search for Captain C. S. Aldrich, whose inscribed sword he found offered for sale. Working numerous sources (which he explains to us) he traces the Captain from his hometown, Ontario, NY, to his service in the 85th N.Y. Regiment and capture at Plymouth, where the sword was surrendered. From Plymouth, the Captain was traced to prison in South Carolina; his escape, and his furtive month-long journey across the mountains to rejoin the Union army in Tennessee.

In closing, Mr. Groene tells of his long friendship and many conversations with the aged son of a Confederate private whose records are most vague. He here speaks feelingly to the value, the dangers, and the delights of oral history:

"...How many of the stories that Paul told me as we sat in front of that stove while the cold January winds swept up the East River from Mobjack Bay, Virginia, were true, I shall never know. I shall never know since the records are silent and I must trust to an old man's memory that most likely quickened and brightened each story with its retelling. I shall never forget those days, as you will never forget stories told to you by your grand old folk, and you, like me may be reluctant to dig into the cold facts, for so often dreams are a better reality. But you must, you know, for grandfather may not have told half the story, and that untold half may be the best part of all."

WANT A DOG? SEE POLICE CHIEF HERE

Anybody want a dog? Chief of Police P. W. Brown said yesterday that he had a wide assortment of sizes, colors, breeds and various degrees of usefulness and uselessness on hand in the dog pound. The dogs are eligible for "adoption" by those who want to pay the taxes and costs due on each.

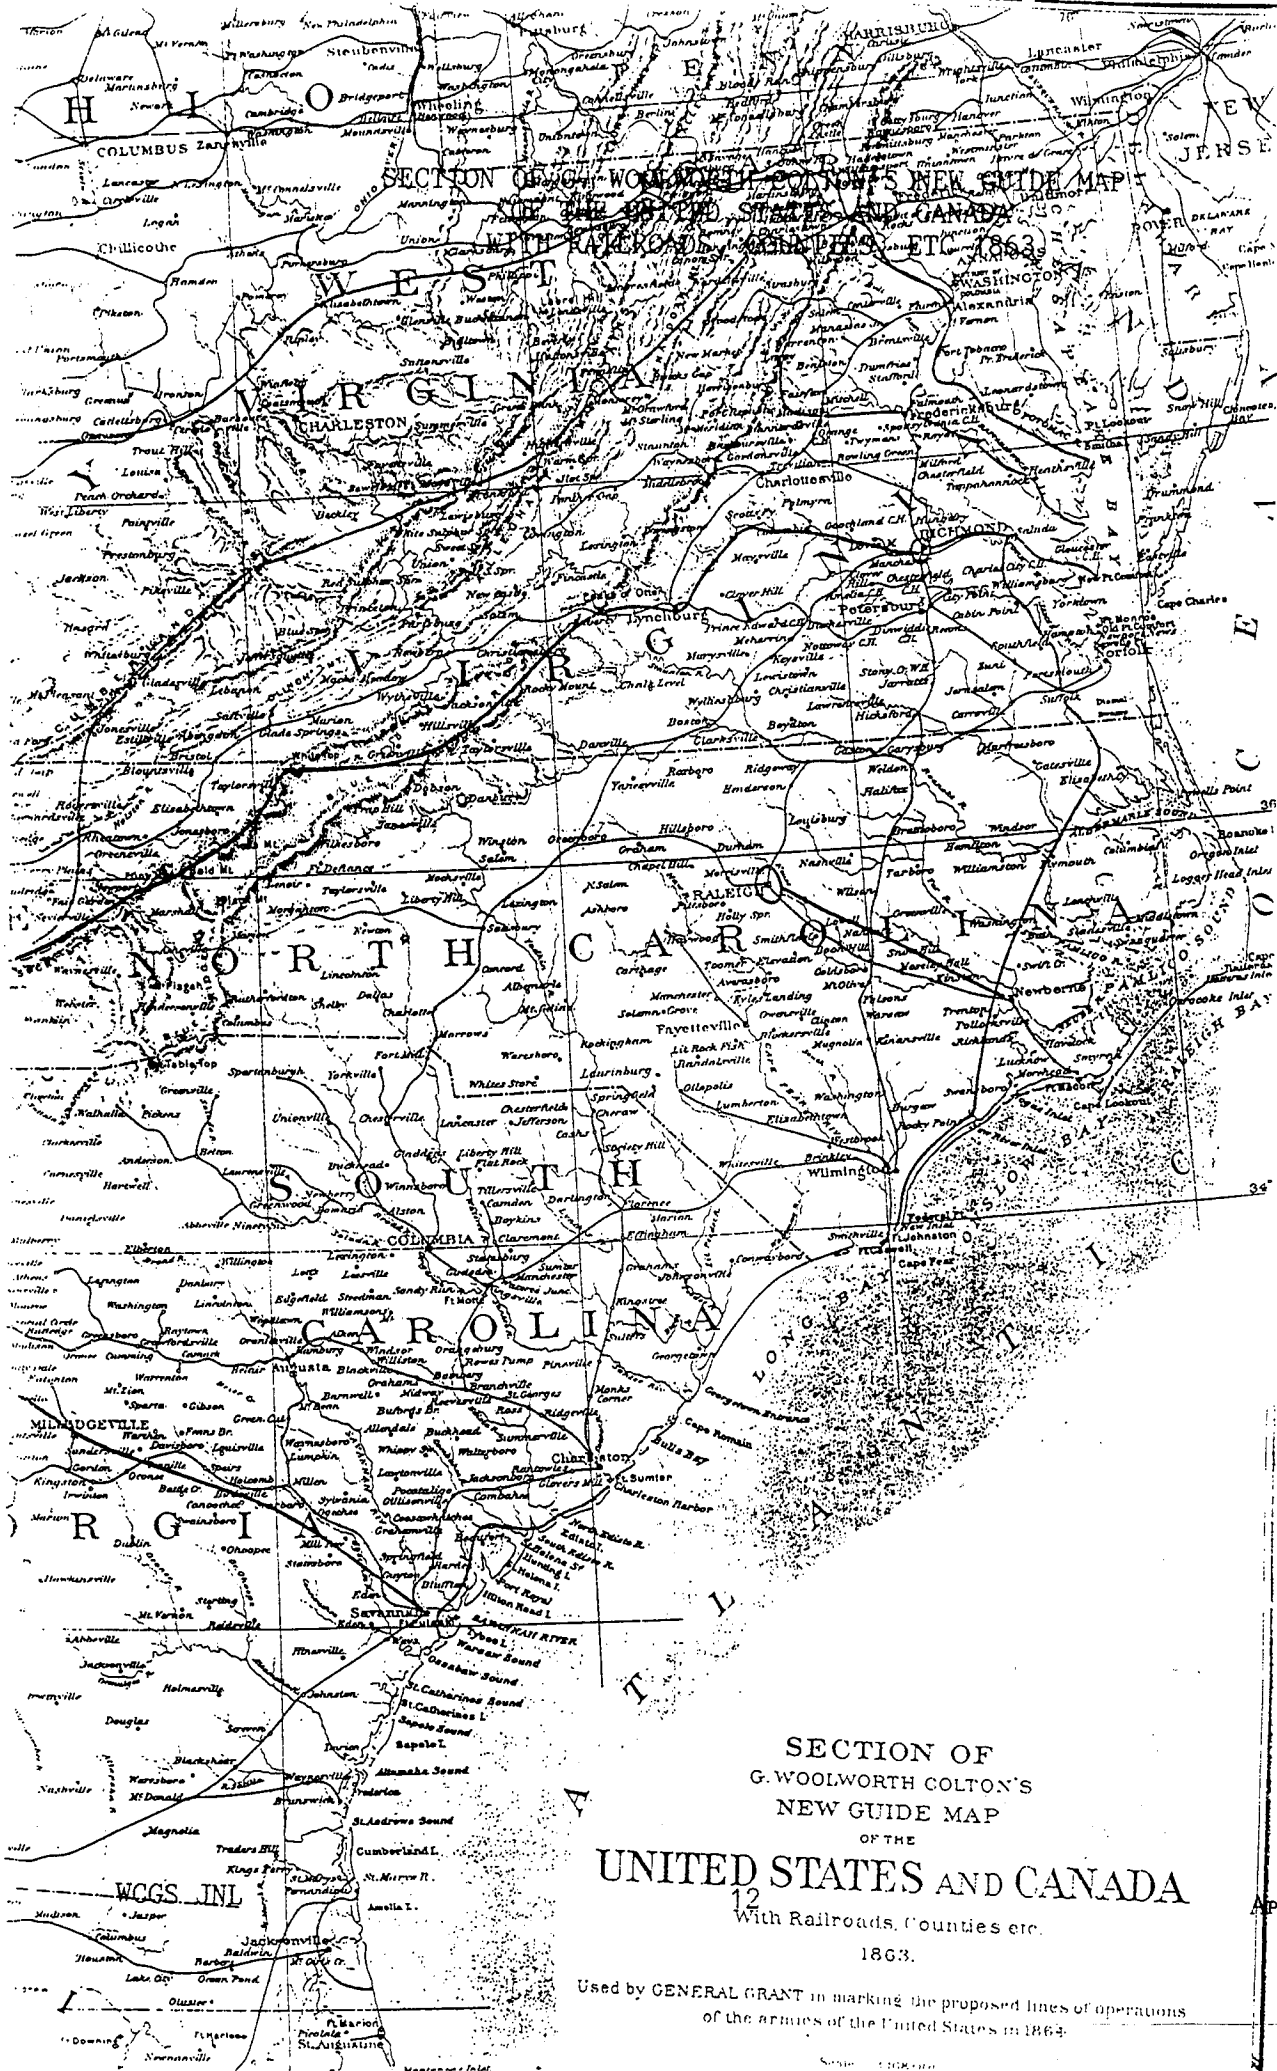

They were rounded up during the past few weeks during a renewed war on strays, and some disposition must be made of them in the near future. anyone who wants a dog - or dogs - is invited to get in touch with the police chief.
